

Introducing Pull-outs

Name _____

A pull-out is when you start to stutter, but you pull-out of the stutter by taking control before you finish. It's like a pilot pulling a plane up just before it crashes or a car swerving just before it crashes. When you pull-out of a stutter, use a bounce, slide, light contact, or easy onset to pull-out.

Let's practice on these words. Stutter and then pull-out before you finish the word.

ball (pull-out with a bounce)

fish (pull-out with a slide)

cat (pull-out with a light contact)

ice (pull-out with an easy onset)

Begin to stutter on the underlined words and then pull-out.

1. I bought a new bike.
2. He used every pencil.
3. She wants some soup.
4. They came for a visit.
5. We need more money.
6. You can come over.
7. Do you want pizza?
8. Is that your shoe?

Pull-out Practice

Name _____

Let's practice pulling-out of stuttering on the pictured words. Start to stutter, but pull-out before you finish. Decide ahead of time how you will pull-out and put a letter cue over the picture.

B = bounce
S = slide

LC = light contact EO = easy onset dinosaur

spider alligator

baseball helmet

bike

wagon

ski

Let's try pulling-out in sentences. Start to stutter on the underlined word and then pull-out before you finish the word. You pick how you'll pull-out. If you want, you can put a letter cue over the word before you start to remind yourself.

I saw a dinosaur.

We went to the late movie.

You should come over.

Do you want dessert?

Everyone laughed at me.

I want a new bed.

Could you hear me?

What time is it?

We said "Thank you."

Let's stay up late tonight.
